The right space FOSTERS IDEAS

Kemp Goldberg has been steadily expanding since it was founded in 2005. Craig Young helped the advertising and communications agency find an affordable deal when they outgrew their first office. So naturally, two years later, when the need for new space arose again they turned to Craig. The charge this time: bigger, more sophisticated, and most importantly, more collaborative. Oh, and uniquely artistic, as befits a creative business. Do the right surroundings help grow ideas? Undoubtedly. When an ad agency is happy in its environment, it shows in the work.

"When Craig showed us this space, it was love at first sight. All this glass and openness—we love the natural light. For years, we'd been chasing each other around on multiple levels. Here, you can see from one end of the office to the other; it's very conducive to collaboration. And because Craig has gotten to know us personally and professionally, he's been a great asset to our firm. He knows his business and he's given us solid advice on two moves now. You could say he's like the Don Draper of real estate."
